WHEREAS: on September 1, 2019, the Bahamas were hit by a most treacherous Category 5 hurricane named Dorian, which literally demolished some of the islands and uprooted many lives of the people living there; and

WHEREAS: through the volunteer efforts of many organizations and individuals who volunteered their time, they were able to help in the collection of over 100,000 pounds of food and supplies for these suffering people and they even found a way to transport the needed items to them; and

WHEREAS: these individuals are unsung heroes of our society and exemplify the value of community service, and are a role model to the residents of this community.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Rex Hardin, Mayor of the City of Pompano Beach and the City Commission, do take pride in the example these citizens who give their time and energy to care for the most vulnerable among us. These selfless deeds have contributed to a culture of compassion and taught people the importance of giving back to their communities. Thank you for the valent efforts you have shown to help the people of the Bahamas. I also encourage all citizens to appreciate the contributions the Bahamian community and their descendants have made, and celebrate the unique history, culture and people of the Bahamas.
